

RHODA EBELEGHE

Rhoda Ebeleghe is a pastor in the Redeemed Christian Church God. She is a songwriter, singer and Author.

She brings these skills and experience into her work as an INAR trained anti-racism facilitator

HOW HAS THE STAND PROJECT HELPED YOU?

"The STAND Project is of an immense help to me, given the opportunity or privilege, it has afforded me to learn and be equipped with all the necessary skills, tools resources needed to combat racism in its entire scope. I have the prerequisite knowledge that racism transcends personal encounters or experiences but is also enshrined in systems and institutions. I now use this in my training work. INAR work has also sent me on wider capacity building courses in Europe and has given me the chance to meet different people from various backgrounds and ethnicities."

WHAT DO YOU LOOK FORWARD TO WORKING ON AS A STAND TRAINER?

"As a STAND TRAINER, my aim is to practically educate and help people understand RACISM in its entirety and how justice can be served. I am also very willing to render my service to any organization wanting to draw up policies to create more inclusivity, in order to have an Ireland that is welcoming to all, despite difference."

The STAND Project is supported by
Rethink Ireland & IHREC